Ghosts And Goblins Due To Prowl This Week

Programs Set By 5 Communities

Lodge, Churches Plan Affairs

A celebration in "the ghost town" will start Halloween festivities this year in the Pickaway County area. "The Ghost Town Welcomes You" is the theme of the annual celebration to be held this year in Yellowbud, located immediately south of the Pickaway-Ross County line.

Yellowbud, cut off from its usual flow of traffic by the construction of a new bridge and bypass on Route 104, has taken the blow philosophically and used it as its goblin-time theme.

The Yellowbud Halloween party will begin with a fish supper from 4 p. m. until 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, followed by the mummies parade with prizes at 7:30 p. m. Music will be by the "Ole Yellowbud Band."

Also due to air witches and hobgoblins will be Ashville, Circleville, New Holland and Williamsport plus a variety of public and private celebrations.

The Ashville celebration will begin at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday from the B and C Oil Co. and march through the village to Community Park, where judging will be performed.

CIRCLEVILLE'S annual big Halloween parade and judging with prizes totalling nearly $115 in cash awards will be held Wednesday night.

Circleville's Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the cash awards, while the actual work of the evening will be performed by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The Circleville parade will form at 7 p. m. Wednesday on West Franklin street at City Hall. Music will be provided by the Circleville high school marching band.

The actual parade of costumed Halloweeners will begin at 7:30 (Continued on Page Two)

Egypt Remains Tense In Tiff With British

CAIRO, Oct. 29—An Egyptian woman was killed and her driver wounded today when British troops fired on the automobile in which they were attempting to crash through a military road block.

The shooting occurred near Tel-el Kebir on the main road between Cairo and Ismailia, principal town in the Suez Canal Zone.

It came after Egypt's state council approved a sweeping conscription bill which would mobilize the nation's manpower in case of "war or threat of war."

The measure—which would permit the drafting of all Egyptians between the ages of 18 and 50—needs only cabinet approval to become law in the current parliamentary recess.

Although the council action came amid the Egyptian government's stepped-up anti-British campaign, Council Chairman Abdel Razak El Sanhoury claimed it had been under close study since "long before the Anglo-Egyptian crisis."

Stable Food Costs Seen In Months Ahead By Price Control Chieftain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — The nation's price stabilization director today sees stable food costs in the months ahead without any change in price controls.

Price Stabilizer Michael DiSalle declared that meat and other food products are in good supply. An official government forecast said U. S. farmers next year will market more food and fiber than ever before but that their net incomes will remain at about the 1951 level. Higher costs, the Agriculture Department said, will hold down the net to producers.

P. W. Glenn of 1010 South Court street Monday displayed three-year-old plants which carried both blossoms and ripened fruit. He had discovered a 30-foot row of the berries about a month ago, but noticed this week that the plants still were bearing despite "killing" frosts.

Britain Recalls Its Envoy To Discuss Iran Dispute

LONDON, Oct. 29—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden formally took over the English Foreign Office today and immediately ordered Britain's ambassador to Iran, Sir Francis Shepherd, to return to London for consultation on the Iranian oil dispute.

The action came as Winston Churchill's "big eight" cabinet ministers officially took over the reins of Britain's new Conservative government with an over-all majority of 19 seats in the 625-seat House of Commons.

The Conservatives won another seat in the return from Argyll today, but the majority is expected to revert to at least 18 and possibly 17 when the last two returns are in. One more result is expected from the Western Isles district later today. That seat has been held by a Laborite. The Laborites are expected to retain Barmley, the 625th seat, in a by-election Nov. 8.

THE CONSERVATIVES now have a 27-seat edge over the ousted Laborites. But the Liberals—with their six seats—have promised to support the new government on measures "clearly conceived" in the interests of Britain. Such support would give a 33-seat margin over the Socialists.

Eden, who arrived early at his Foreign Office desk, found complete briefs prepared on the pressing foreign issues—Egypt, Iran, the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He made it known that he wants to review thoroughly the critical Iranian oil situation ahead of a re-consideration of the entire issue by the full cabinet later this week.

Any fresh step toward ending the deadlock will be decided by the cabinet. Churchill, meanwhile is expected to complete his cabinet today, announcing the names of the new ministers shortly thereafter.

He remained closeted in his Chartwell home until the early morning hours with Sir Norman Brook, secretary of the cabinet, discussing administrative changes and arrangements.

The new developments followed Liberal Party Leader Clement Davies' refusal yesterday of an important post in the new government, despite the announced conditional support of his party.

Churchill made the offer during a lengthy luncheon conference in a move to win added strength for his 18-seat Conservative majority in the new House of Commons. Laborite spokesmen immediately interpreted Davies' refusal as a rebuff to Churchill despite the Liberal assurance of support.

However, in other political circles it was believed Davies' action was mainly an effort to preserve the Liberals' independence.

Cincinnati Arson Experts Studying Fatal Blazes

CINCINNATI, Oct. 29—The Cincinnati arson squad investigated today a mysterious series of three fires within one city block that caused four deaths and injured 10 others.

Three of the injured are on the critical list.

The worst of the fires yesterday roared through a five-story tenement building crowded with 35 people.

Three members of one family were trapped and suffocated. They are Stanley Neal; his wife, Ruth, and their seven-year-old daughter, Martha.

Many persons escaped by jumping from windows into firemen's nets. One woman was killed when her head struck the metal rim of a net. She is Mrs. Ruby Whitrock, 57.

A man jumped from the third floor before nets were set up and suffered fractures.

While firemen fought the blaze, another fire flared up a short distance away. Earlier, still another had broken out at a nearby address.

DiSalle also noted an expected rise in beef production, but warned housewives against any rush for higher priced cuts. He said there are more cattle on the ranges today than "for a good many years and possibly in all of history."

The price chief said he was not advocating any boycott of the more expensive cuts, but suggested that careful buying by housewives will "get us through this period in pretty good shape."

A-Aerial Bomb Blasts Over Desert

Familiar Mushroom Cloud Is Seen

LAS VEGAS, Oct. 29—A red-tailed B-29, roaring over the Nevada test site, has paved the way today for the entrance of troops in simulated atomic warfare by dropping an atomic aerial weapon on the dust-dry desert "battleground."

The bombing, producing a small but violent blast, was dropped at 7:21 a. m. (PST) (10:21 a. m. EST) yesterday. One more A-bomb drop, it was understood, will be made tomorrow morning—weather permitting—and then on Thursday troops will enter the tests.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said, however, that the troops will be used in history's first atomic war games only if the A-bomb drops of yesterday and tomorrow show satisfactory results. They added that every step will be taken to protect the troops from danger.

Yesterday's bomb produced an effect which could be likened as a camera flash-bulb against a cloudless daytime sky. The flash was visible to rooftop watchers in Las Vegas, about 80 miles away.

THE FLASH was purplish-yellow in color during its brief moment of life. Then, 90 seconds later after the momentary dome-shaped arc of light streaked against the northern sky in the broad light of the rising sun the familiar mushroom cloud arose from the desert floor.

The second atomic burst in the current series was not nearly as violent as the ones set off earlier this year in the Nevada desert by the AEC.

Troops completing "Exercise Desert Rock" probably will be scattered throughout other Army and Air Force units to serve as "leaders" in later specialized atomic warfare training.

Detailed results of Nevada test site experiments will be submitted to the Defense Department for intense study and military consideration. The tests could launch the United States into a new concept of warfare, tactical weapons of which would be based on atomic energy.

The weather bureau in Las Vegas said today that weather in the test (Continued on Page Two)

Korean Land Mine Turns Out To Be Very Live

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 29—Lero Prinz thought the land mine he bought from two hitchhiking soldiers from Korea for a dollar was quite a bargain.

He used it in his den as a doorstop and to stand on when he wanted to reach something. But yesterday he made the startling discovery that it was alive, that the detonating pin had never been pulled.

He gingerly took it to the police station where explosives experts pulled the pin and told him:

"You're lucky you don't weigh 200 pounds. That's the weight it would have taken to blow it up."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — Being fat isn't funny. It's dangerous. It depends upon how much you're overweight, but in any event your case can be graded as bad, very bad or disastrous.

If you don't get high blood pressure, lung trouble, diabetes or cancer—and the chances are good you will—you'll probably die before others of average weight.

You're a relatively poor surgical risk, too, and you're more prone to have an accident.

Taft, McMahon Stage Debate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, attacked as the candidate of "bitter isolationists," believes that his foreign policy for the 1952 presidential campaign puts first priority on preserving America's liberties.

Taft, the only announced presidential candidate of either party, set the tone of his discussion of foreign policy for the coming campaign in a television debate with Sen. McMahon, (D) Conn. They spoke on the NBC American Forum of the Air.

Stating his case for homefront safeguards, the Ohioan said that U. S. foreign policy should not be aimed at "uplifting the rest of the world" nor "running the world through our money and armed forces."

McMahon, insisting that Taft's votes in the Senate had shown a repeated reluctance to support such things as the Marshall Plan, British loan, Atlantic pact or military aid programs, defended the UN Korean effort.

THE DEMOCRAT said it has demonstrated that "aggression will be met" and has given strength to the free world as "one of the most glorious demonstrations of collective security the world has ever shown."

But Taft charged that the Korean war was "unnecessary" and even conceded that it might be termed "useless." He said the conflict has demonstrated that a "small aggressor can't get away" with aggression, but that a large aggressor can.

He called the UN "an utter failure" so far as stopping aggression is concerned.

Taft, now well into an extensive political speaking tour, announced his candidacy for the GOP presidential nomination ten days ago and since has set up his campaign committee with a Washington headquarters.

McMahon said of Taft: "His heart is not behind the positive program we need to protect America. He is the candidate of the bitter, bitter isolationists."

SURPRISE ATTACK FEARED

More Horse-Trading Seen In UN-Red Truce Talks

MUNSAN, Oct. 29—United Nations delegates stood firm today in rejecting a Red-proposed Korean truce line which they said would rob Allied troops of protection against any post-armistice "surprise" attack.

Meeting at Panmunjon to the accompaniment of nearby Allied artillery fire, the UN and Red members of a four-man subcommittee haggled for three hours and 25 minutes, made no progress toward agreeing on where to locate a cease-fire belt.

A Monday night communique issued at the UN delegation's Munsan headquarters protested anew that the Communist plan for a buffer zone south of the battlefield would require Allied troops to make a "unilateral" withdrawal.

Such a retirement, the bulletin declared, would "deprive" the UN forces "of important defense positions from which to protect themselves against a surprise resumption of hostilities."

THE COMMUNIQUE added that the Reds "still refused to modify their proposed line of demarcation" despite a barrage of UN argument against it.

"The discussions were completely inconclusive," a UN delegation spokesman said.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckols told newsmen that the day's talks were taken up entirely with arguments over the military value of the Ongjin and Yonan peninsulas and with discrepancies in defining the "line of contact" along the battlefield.

Both of these matters are key factors in the crucial issue of where to draw an armistice demarcation line and buffer zone.

Nuckols said the UN subcommittee—Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hode and Rear Adm. Arleigh Burke—insisted that the Yonan and Ongjin peninsulas are militarily unimportant.

The two Red delegates were equally insistent that the peninsulas, which jut into the Yellow (Continued on Page Two)

Congress Panel Gives Proposal

800,000 Trainees A Year Suggested

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — The congressional commission on Universal Military Training today advocated starting UMT next June with 60,000 eighteen-year-olds.

Members of the commission urged the early date in the hope of reducing the regular armed forces from three and one-half to two million men within a few years. They said the program can start June 1 if Congress acts by the end of March.

The proposal was advanced at a news conference called by the commission to explain its report urging six months' training for all 18-year-olds.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, speaking for the chairman, said the program can be built up to 800,000 trainees annually "within two or three years" if international tension eases to the point where fewer men are required for the regular forces.

Townsend Hoopes, executive director of the commission, said that for UMT to reach the maximum 800,000 man level, the regular forces would have to be reduced to about two million.

RETIRED ADM. Thomas C. Kincaid, another commission member, said this would be a saving because men in regular forces cost $10,000 per man per year and UMT youths will cost only about $3,000.

At the start, the commission indicated that only men just reaching 18 next June 1 would be called by their local draft boards for the separate six months' training.

A representative of the American Legion told the news conference that the Legion favors the six months' continuous training recommended by the commission.

The five-man commission on universal military service told Congress that its proposals:

"Will provide this nation with a safeguard against the violent fluctuations which in the past characterized our military preparedness and plagued the conduct of a consistent foreign policy based on adequate strength."

The commission, set up under the draft act of last June to develop a universal military training program, proposed:

1. Six months of continuous training for all able-bodied 18-year-olds, with half of them going into the Army.

2. Each trainee would also be (Continued on Page Two)

Standing Guard At Armistice Tent One Of Loneliest Jobs In The Army

PANMUNJOM, Oct. 29 — One of the loneliest jobs in the Army is divided among the handful of American military policemen who guard the armistice conference site at Panmunjon every night.

Each of the MPs draws a three-hour stint of duty alone at night around the conference area.

The only man he sees during the three hours is a Communist who also has to work the beat alone.

"Sometimes," said Corp. William C. Scroggins, "it isn't so bad because you may draw a Communist who will walk with you just for company. But lots of the Communies won't have anything to do with you so you walk around alone."

Scroggins, who comes from Rollins, Wyo., speaks some Japanese so he can talk to the North Korean soldiers, all of whom had to learn the language as schoolboys when the Japanese controlled Korea.

Sgt. Billy F. Pearce of Plant City, Fla., said, "they're even afraid to talk with us," and explained:

"We ask them questions about what's going on, but they are tight with their answers."

"And they don't ask us anything. They're just scared to talk."

"And they're just as scared as we are that something will happen here, like a shooting or something that will get things all tangled up again."

It may be that the Communies have to be more careful in their talk because they might be under observation.

The guard tent where off-duty Communist MPs sleep is right across the road from the conference tent. The American MP guard tent is 1,000 yards down the road.

Meeting at Panmunjon to the accompaniment of nearby Allied artillery fire, the UN and Red members of a four-man subcommittee haggled for three hours and 25 minutes, made no progress toward agreeing on where to locate a cease-fire belt.

A Monday night communique issued at the UN delegation's Munsan headquarters protested anew that the Communist plan for a buffer zone south of the battlefield would require Allied troops to make a "unilateral" withdrawal.

Such a retirement, the bulletin declared, would "deprive" the UN forces "of important defense positions from which to protect themselves against a surprise resumption of hostilities."

THE COMMUNIQUE added that the Reds "still refused to modify their proposed line of demarcation" despite a barrage of UN argument against it.

"The discussions were completely inconclusive," a UN delegation spokesman said.

Brig. Gen. William P. Nuckolls told newsmen that the day's talks were taken up entirely with arguments over the military value of the Ongjin and Yonan peninsulas and with discrepancies in defining the "line of contact" along the battlefield.

Both of these matters are key factors in the crucial issue of where to draw an armistice demarcation line and buffer zone.

Nuckolls said the UN subcommittee—Maj. Gen. Henry I. Hode and Rear Adm. Arleigh Burke—insisted that the Yonan and Ongjin peninsulas are militarily unimportant.

The two Red delegates were equally insistent that the peninsulas, which jut into the Yellow (Continued on Page Two)

The association's executive committee, in a letter signed by its president, John D. Blackford of Cincinnati, said the "gag rule" states in effect that "Americans, particularly college students, cannot be trusted to hear two sides of a question and decide for themselves what is right and what is wrong."

The executive board ruling demands that prospective speakers on the university campus must be cleared first by the office of the president. The OEA said:

"It places absolute censorship in the hands of one man, without even the responsibility of giving the reasons for such censorship."

But Dr. Hundley doesn't endorse cigars as a substitute for reducing. "There are," he remarked, "better and less expensive ways than smoking."

As anyone can see, fat people seem to be happier than the thin man with the hang-dog look. But are they really happier?

"I don't know," Dr. Hundley said. "But it is a good thing if a fat man does enjoy life while he can, because experience indicates he isn't going to live long to do it."

Japan Ponders Pact With Reds

TOKYO, Oct. 29—Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida said today Japan would agree to establish a trade office in Communist China if the Reds were willing.

The premier told the house of councilors during a debate on the peace treaty and the U. S.-Japan security pact that he also would be willing to establish trade offices in the Nationalist Chinese stronghold of Formosa. He claimed that no political ideology was involved.

Congress Panel Gives Proposal

300,000 Trainees A Year Suggested

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—The congressional commission on Universal Military Training today advocated starting UMT next June with 60,000 eighteen-year-olds.

Members of the commission urged the early date in the hope of reducing the regular armed forces from three and one-half to two million men within a few years. They said the program can start June 1 if Congress acts by the end of March.

The proposal was advanced at a news conference called by the commission to explain its report urging six months' training for all 18-year-olds.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, speaking for the chairman, said the program can be built up to 800,000 trainees annually "within two or three years" if international tension eases to the point where fewer men are required for the regular forces.

Townsend Hoopes, executive director of the commission, said that for UMT to reach the maximum 800,000 man level, the regular forces would have to be reduced to about two million.

RETIRED ADM. Thomas C. Kincaid, another commission member, said this would be a saving because men in regular forces cost $10,000 per man per year and UMT youths will cost only about $3,000. At the start, the commission indicated that only men just reaching 18 next June 1 would be called by their local draft boards for the separate six months' training.

A representative of the American Legion told the news conference that the Legion favors the six months' continuous training recommended by the commission.

The five-man commission on universal military service told Congress that its proposals:

"Will provide this nation with a safeguard against the violent fluctuations which in the past characterized our military preparedness and plagued the conduct of a consistent foreign policy based on adequate strength."

The commission, set up under the draft act of last June to develop a universal military training program, proposed:

1. Six months of continuous training for all able-bodied 18-year-olds, with half of them going into the Army.

2. Each trainee would also be (Continued on Page Two)

One bid sought by the board will be for the contract for building the new department structure, to be located immediately west of City Hall, where the city cottage now stands.

Another bid asked by the utilities board is for the ultimate removal of the present city cottage.

Bids on the removal of the present cottage will be taken in alternate fashion; one sought from persons who might wish to buy the building for the purpose of moving it; the other seeking bids from persons who would raze the building to the foundation for the purpose of salvage.

Deputy Busy As Pranksters Burn Fodder

Halloweening pranksters gave Deputy Sheriff Jack Dewey a rough way to go last weekend near Ashville.

Dewey said he was chasing a gang of Halloweeners who were burning fodder shocks.

"We started chasing after them," Dewey said, "but found a farm gate in the middle of the road. We picked the gate up and started again only to be confronted by another gate."

Dewey said the pranksters kept "just one gate ahead of us." The chase ended when the prowl car came up against a roadblock of brush, containing tree-sized limbs.

Sea off westernmost Korea, are of considerable strategic value.

The Communists had offered to give up parts of these areas in exchange for UN withdrawals from such key battlefield positions as Heartbreak Ridge and the Iron triangle.

THE UN COMMAND has rejected this proposition and insists on adoption of its proposal for an armistice zone generally following the battleline. The UN maintains that the Red plan would give the Communists vital areas in return for peninsular sector of no military consequence.

However, the UN has offered to make minor adjustments in its original buffer zone proposal. And the Reds had shown some inclination of area where the opposing troops are waging their forward skirmishes—the so-called "line of contact."

This had engendered a feeling of guarded optimism over the prospects for ending the Korean war, now in its 17th month.

There were signs pointing to an eventual armistice after some more hard horse-trading.

For one thing, the Reds have already yielded on a major point. They have dropped their long-standing demand for a buffer zone straddling Parallel 38 and have accepted, tacitly, the principle that a truce line should be related to the battlefront.

Red China's Peiping Radio was silent on the progress of the Panmunjom talks. Some observers took this to mean the Communists may possibly wish to leave their delegate an opportunity to back down from their armistice line stand without losing face.

Doctor's Death Being Probed In New England

NAHANT, Mass., Oct. 29—Police today awaited a report from Harvard medical school pathologists on the cause of the death of Dr. Albert H. Covner, 51, whose body was found Saturday in North Reading woods.

Dr. Covner, a heart specialist, had been bothered by cranks since a 15-year-old baby sitter and her two teen-aged girl friends looted his home of about $18,000 to finance a brief fling at high living in New York.

Police declined to discuss the case pending receipt of the pathologists' report. Dr. Thomas P. Devlin, medical examiner, reported he found "no evidence of foul play" in a preliminary autopsy. The doctor suffered from a cardiac condition.

The doctor last was seen Friday after he notified hospitals where he was a consultant that he would not be available for a time. He asked an associate to care for any of his patients who needed medical aid, paid a month's rent in advance on his office and paid off his nurse-secretary.

The teen-aged girls, Roberta McCauley of Nahant, and Eileen Jeffrey, 17, and Marilyn Curry, 16, both of Lynn, are being held in New York.

'Able Mabels' Get Backing Of Mme. Perkins

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—"Able Mabels"—the gals passed over because bosses prefer "Pretty Peggys" as secretaries or stenographers—found a defender today in Frances Perkins, former secretary of labor.

Miss Perkins, who is a U. S. civil service commissioner, asked yesterday at a two-day personnel-management conference at Bear Mountain Inn:

"How long can we afford to indulge in the whims of many executives?"

"Their specifications for secretaries and stenographers add up like this:

"They must be young, good-looking, well-dressed, carefully groomed, sweet of disposition, patient, alert, far-sighted, well-educated and, of course, technically perfect."

"Now isn't that asking a little too much?"

"There are plenty of competent stenographers available who may be a little older, not quite so good looking as some others, but well-trained and ready to do a good and loyal job if they can only get hired."

Crowding Prowl Car Costs $25

A 62-year-old Columbus man was fined $25 and costs last weekend after having crowded a state highway patrol car from the highway.

Wells said the Columbus driver was passing a string of autos Sunday night on Route 23 north as Wells approached in the prowl car.

"He didn't have any lights," Wells said, "and was on top of me before I saw him. I hit the berm."

4 Persons Injured In Couple Of Auto Accidents Over Weekend

Four persons suffered minor injuries on Pickaway County highways last weekend in two traffic accidents involving seven autos.

Three persons were hurt at about 4 p. m. Sunday in a "telescope" accident involving five autos on Route 23 near the Pickaway-Franklin County line.

State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells said the five-car wreck started when Othmar Bendele, 45, of Columbus, had a flat tire. He parked his auto in the northbound lane of traffic.

Behind the Bendele auto, cars operated by Harry Lantz, 35, of Parma; Lester Thompson, 22, of Columbus; and Franklin Shaw, 61, of Barberton all stopped.

A CAR OPERATED north by Thurl Kaufman, 39, of Bluffton, Ind., failed to stop. The Kaufman car skidded 69 feet on the highway before slamming into the rear of the Shaw car.

The Kaufman car smashed into the Shaw car which smashed into the Thompson car which smashed into the Lantz car.

The Bendele car at the head of the procession remained unscathed.

Injured were Dovie Folkerth, 61, of Delaware, passenger in the Kaufman car, lacerated cheek; Shaw, driver of the fourth car in the procession, both knees lacerated; and Edith Ramey, 51, of Barberton, passenger in the Shaw auto, possible rib fracture, lacerated right knee.

Wells said the "telescope" accident demolished the front end of the Kaufman car, both front and rear of the Shaw car, damaged the front and rear of the Thompson car and inflicted minor damage to the rear of the Lantz car.

Bendele, whose auto was parked in the highway, was fined $15 and costs for the violation later in the court of Ashville Mayor Elmer Malone while Kaufman, whose auto struck the Shaw car, was fined $15 and costs in the same court for having failed to stop.

A nine-year-old Gallipolis girl was injured in the only other personal injury accident of the weekend, a mishap which happened at 3 p. m. Sunday on Route 23 about five miles north of Circleville.

KERNS LUCAS, 35, of Huntington, W. Va., told Deputy Sheriff Walter Richards he applied his brakes to stop for a truck on Route 23. The brakes threw his auto to the left side of the road, he said.

An approaching auto operated by Virgil Hatfield, 25, of Gallipolis, took to the ditch to escape the Lucas vehicle.

Injured was Rita Hunt, passenger in the Hatfield car, who suffered a bruised face, bruised leg and injured left ear.

Traffic Cases Bring Fines For Five Men

Also fined in the magistrate's court were Lloyd Parmen, 31, of Shawnee, Okla., $25 and costs for being in actual physical control of his auto while drunk; and George Wallace, 29, of Columbus, $5 and costs for failing to stop at a stop sign.

Parmen was arrested in Duvall by Deputy Jack Dewey, while Wallace was arrested by Dewey following a minor traffic accident at Routes 104 and 22.

In the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller, John Jacoby of Camp Breckenridge, Ky., was fined $15 and costs for speeding while David Bender of Columbus was fined $10 and costs for crossing a freshly-painted centerline.

site area should remain stable throughout the week, but strong shifting winds may arise during early morning hours to delay the already lagging series.

Official observers and other important persons were expected to begin arriving in Las Vegas within the next few days, and undoubtedly will include congressmen and key officials of the Defense Department. The observers will be asked to respect security regulations after seeing the war games.

YESTERDAY'S B-29 of the Special Weapons Command based at Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, N. M., featured an incredibly accurate bombardier who pressed the button exactly at the right moment, sending the bomb screaming toward the white cross mark and exploding with a wallop.

Skilled observers estimated that the potent weapon, felt and heard only within a limited distance popped within 100 feet of the ground, just over a huge circular patch of blacktopping spread by construction engineers to prevent as much interference as possible with electronic equipment.

The powerful blast immediately was recorded by hundreds of sensitive instruments, inter-connected by a maze of cables and relays scattered through the desolate man-made battleground, and within a short time highly trained safety crews checked the target area for any possible dangerous after-effects.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Here is something you might wish to read to your younger children or induce those under twelve to read:

Halloween is the time for masks, witches, giant pumpkins, ghosts and strange sounds. It's the time when you may feel a wee bit scared for a little while and then discover there was nothing to be scared about. How you laugh when you find out that you were fooled or someone else was!

You may remember how frightened you once felt when you were making the steepest dip on a roller coaster. But you felt safe again when you were on a flat place or going up.

You also may remember when you heard strange sounds that frightened you while you were alone in the dark. But after you discovered that these were only the sounds of the wind, you felt all right again.

During Halloween you may like to shiver and feel a bit scared at a mask or ghost and then learn who is wearing the mask or playing ghost. After you feel safe and brave again, how wise, big and important you feel, especially if you find out it was all make-believe before another child makes this discovery.

YOU MAY HAVE had so much fun at growing wise and brave after having been scared, that you will try to have another kind of fun by scaring some other child on purpose to see him frightened. But you won't scare a younger child for fun, if you will remember how terrible it was for you when you used to be scared. You won't want to make him suffer so.

Because you are so grown-up, wise and brave, you are going to have fun on Halloween by helping younger children not to be scared. If they are frightened at a mask you are wearing, you will take it off and show them what it is. You may have one of them put the mask on and look at himself in the mirror. If they are frightened at a ghost, you will show them what the ghost really is.

Perhaps you will show them how to be a ghost by putting a white sheet over one of them and having him make a moaning sound.

It can be fun on Halloween to dress up in such a way that older persons can't easily tell who you are. Often it is fun for these older persons to have a visit from you.

But when you are so dressed up as not to be easily known, you may suppose you can have fun by breaking things, throwing them, knocking them over, or by sneaking doors and windows with soap and the like. But it would not be fun for you if you were the owner of these things.

Just imagine how you would feel if somebody came around at Halloween and injured or destroyed your toys and books and other things which are very precious to you. But you can have great fun at playing games with other children at their homes or yours. We can all have a lot of fun on Halloween without doing any harm to anybody or anything.

(Parents may have my bulletins, "Fear" and "Teaching Child Care of Property," in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this newspaper.)

Answering Parents' Questions

Q. What do you think of parents camping outdoors in one or more tents with their children for a week-end or longer?

A. It can be a very pleasant and profitable experience for the whole family and should happen far more often than it does. Even a family outing for one meal can have great values.

Q. Why do you so often urge us adoptive parents to tell a child he is adopted?

A. For his happiness and theirs. Should he first get the information from others, he may feel you had deliberately deceived him. Constantly trying to keep the facts from him does harm to you inside and hampers the relationship between you.

Navy Future Bright, Top Civil Aide Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball believes the U.S. Navy is ready to make new amphibious landings in the Korean war, such as Inchon, if called upon to do so.

In time of war, the fleet can turn the Mediterranean into a "friendly lake" and seal off North Africa from any major land aggression, he told a dinner of the Navy League of the U.S.

He added he has "every hope" that we will have in service a nuclear-powered submarine within the next few years.

Progress on nuclear-powered submarines "is very encouraging," Kimball disclosed, and "if we can solve certain problems there is practically no limit to the speed which can be attained by these new sub-surface craft."

However, he said, "pushbutton" warfare is still something for the future, and until the new weapons are proven, classic methods of warfare will have to be relied upon.

Wife Changes Man's Mind; Kiddies Saved

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29 — Frank Gombac, 42, of Cleveland, can be thankful today that his wife makes him change his mind every now and then.

Gombac took his wife, Victoria, 40, and two children, James, 12, and Geraldine, 4, on a shopping trip on the near west side Sunday and was going to let the children remain in the car while he and his wife completed the purchases.

Mrs. Gombac insisted that the children accompany them, however. When the four returned to their car about 15 minutes later they found a 40-foot smokestack, about two feet in diameter and built of steel and brick, was blown onto and about their car by winds which reached 30 miles an hour.

Battalion Fire Chief Charles W. Rees said the stack had been unused for some time and had deteriorated.

Ailing Farmer Given Assist By Neighbors

Another good neighbor deed was enacted last week on the farm of the late Fred Long which is tenanted by Howard Fouch.

Due to personal illness and loss of time from the injury of his son, Doyle in an auto accident, Fouch was unable to get his 35 acres of corn harvested.

Neighbors came in with picker, truck, tractors, discs and drill to finish the corn harvest and to sow wheat.

Those participating were Henry Jackson, Harrison Wolfe, Ted Wolfe, and Harold, Roger and David Holdren.

Truman-Barkley Drive Predicted

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 — Secretary of Labor Tobin says President Truman and Vice President Barkley will run again next year and will win.

He told 3,000 persons yesterday at the Jewish labor conference: "I predict the ticket of Truman and Barkley will sweep the country in '52."

After making this statement the Democratic cabinet officer added that "I do not know what President Truman is going to do."

Barkley and Mrs. Barkley sat beside Tobin, but the vice president made no mention of politics in his short talk.

Work Already Beginning On Livestock Exposition

CHICAGO, Oct. 29—Work has begun on the 52nd edition of the International Live Stock Exposition, the nation's leading agricultural event. Early entries indicate that the 1951 show will attract larger classes than ever before.

The exposition, which will get underway in the International Stock Yards Nov. 24 for an eight-day run through Dec. 1, each year makes Chicago the center of interest of the continent's livestock industry.

Last year's show drew over 11 thousand head of the nation's top cattle, sheep, swine and horses from 34 states and two Canadian provinces. To the livestock breeder and feeder it is the "world's series" of all shows, where final decisions in livestock competitions are made. An International winning is regarded as the highest award that an exhibitor can attain.

Cash prizes will again total over $100,000 according to the management. A $56,000 prize list is offered in the Hereford, Angus, Shorthorn and Polled Shorthorn breeds. Swine premiums will total $10,000 with sheep prizes consisting of $8,300.

AN EIGHT-DAY program, filled with interest to the farm people of the continent, is planned.

The Junior Livestock Feeding Contest for farm boys and girls showing livestock of their own raising will dominate the first day's program in the amphitheatre. Cattle and sheep carlot classes will also be judged that day. The 29th International Grain and Hay Show and the Wool Show on the third

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Here is something you might wish to read to your younger children or induce those under twelve to read.

Halloween is the time for masks, witches, giant pumpkins, ghosts and strange sounds. It's the time when you may feel a wee bit scared for a little while and then discover there was nothing to be scared about. How you laugh when you find out that you were fooled or someone else was!

You may remember how frightened you once felt when you were making the steepest dip on a roller coaster. But you felt safe again when you were on a flat place or going up.

You also may remember when you heard strange sounds that frightened you while you were alone in the dark. But after you discovered that these were only the sounds of the wind, you felt all right again.

During Halloween you may like to shiver and feel a bit scared at a mask or ghost and then learn who is wearing the mask or playing ghost. After you feel safe and brave again, how wise, big and important you feel, especially if you find out it was all make-believe before another child makes this discovery.

YOU MAY HAVE had so much fun at growing wise and brave after having been scared, that you will try to have another kind of fun by scaring some other child on purpose to see him frightened. But you won't scare a younger child for fun, if you will remember how terrible it was for you when you used to be scared. You won't want to make him suffer so.

Because you are so grown-up, wise and brave, you are going to have fun on Halloween by helping younger children not to be scared. If they are frightened at a mask you are wearing, you will take it off and show them what it is. You may have one of them put the mask on and look at himself in the mirror. If they are frightened at a ghost, you will show them what the ghost really is.

Perhaps you will show them how to be a ghost by putting a white sheet over one of them and having him make a moaning sound.

It can be fun on Halloween to dress up in such a way that older persons can't easily tell who you are. Often it is fun for these older persons to have a visit from you.

But when you are so dressed up as not to be easily known, you may suppose you can have fun by breaking things, throwing them, knocking them over, or by smearing doors and windows with soap and the like. But it would not be fun for you if you were the owner of these things.

Just imagine how you would feel if somebody came around at Halloween and injured or destroyed your toys and books and other things which are very precious to you. But you can have great fun at playing games with other children at their homes or yours. We can all have a lot of fun on Halloween without doing any harm to anybody or anything.

(Parents may have my bulletins, "Fear" and "Teaching Child Care of Property," in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this newspaper.)

Answering Parents' Questions

Q. What do you think of parents camping outdoors in one or more tents with their children for a week-end or longer?

A. It can be a very pleasant and profitable experience for the whole family and should happen far more often than it does. Even a family outing for one meal can have great values.

Q. Why do you so often urge us adoptive parents to tell a child he is adopted?

A. For his happiness and theirs. Should he first get the information from others, he may feel you had deliberately deceived him. Constantly trying to keep the facts from him does harm to you inside and hampers the relationship between you.

Highest average weekly earnings for August was listed for the construction industry which experienced a gain of two percent to $94.98.

Navy Future Bright, Top Civil Aide Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball believes the U.S. Navy is ready to make new amphibious landings in the Korean war, such as Inchon, if called upon to do so.

In time of war, the fleet can turn the Mediterranean into a "friendly lake" and seal off North Africa from any major land aggression, he told a dinner of the Navy League of the U.S.

He added he has "every hope that we will have in service a nuclear-powered submarine within the next few years."

Progress on nuclear-powered submarines "is very encouraging," Kimball disclosed, and "if we can solve certain problems there is practically no limit to the speed which can be attained by these new sub-surface craft."

However, he said, "pushbutton" warfare is still something for the future, and until the new weapons are proven, classic methods of warfare will have to be relied upon.

PUBLIC MORALS

THERE are abundant symptoms of a moral collapse in high places in the United States. Today's rascals are circumspect and subtle. They manage, most of them, to stay within legal bounds. Principally they violate not the letter of the law, but its spirit. Their offenses are mostly against propriety and ethics.

In many ways this is more dangerous than old-fashioned corruption, because while it is difficult to detect and even more difficult to punish, its effects on public standards of integrity and honor can be more degrading than outright criminality.

This unhappy condition has engaged the attention of Congress. A Senate subcommittee, after investigation, has submitted a report notable for its bluntness and frank in its expressions of dismay. The subcommittee spares none. It criticizes both the executive branch and Congress and finally the public itself.

"Influence peddlers can exist only as long as businessmen or others are willing to patronize them," the committee says. "Favoritism can be a problem only when individual men and women seek favors of the government" by offering gifts and exerting improper pressure. It blames "interested parties not willing to let the wheels of government turn unassisted."

At least part of the trouble stems from perpetuation of depression-born emergency agencies, such as RFC. In part it stems from over-regulation of private enterprise and the appointment of regulators who are no better than the businessmen whose misdeeds invited government interference. The Senate subcommittee proposes a series of enactments which would tend to check the recent evils symbolized by the White House stenographer's mink coat.

But laws alone will not be enough. They can always be evaded by the ingenious. It is necessary also to appoint men of whose honesty there can be no doubt and then to show no mercy to those who turn out to be crooks.

The committee asserts that "the moral standards of the country provide the ethical environment which in turn conditions the standard of behavior of public officials." This is only partly true. It is no justification for official corruption. Government leads. It sets the pace and establishes the tone of national life. Primary responsibility for honest government rests with Congress and the White House. If their ethics are sound, no crooked businessman can prevail against them.

Congressmen continue to vote for higher taxes while wondering audibly whether they aren't too high. If they are really in doubt, let them ask the taxpayers.

MARCH OF EVENTS

Foreign Affairs More Vital Than Ever to U. S. Citizen

New Responsibilities Weigh Heavy on State Department

WASHINGTON—International affairs headquarters for the American people is the Department of State, situated about half way between the White House and the Potomac river in the nation's capital. And never were problems more immense, momentous, and diverse thrust upon the diplomats of any nation.

Wars begin when communication between peoples breaks down and diplomatic efforts fail to bring about understanding and co-operative action to solve problems. The United States today is leader of the free world's independent nations that are striving to perpetuate civilization's finest heritage of justice and human rights, and to defend them from Communism's international conspiracy manipulated from Moscow's Kremlin.

This new responsibility makes our State department a tangible target of attack by propagandists and headline-hunting politicians abroad and in this country. No other agency of our government stands so immediately under the spotlight of world attention.

Let's look at the organization and functions of the State department. The headquarters is only one of some 25 buildings occupied by the department's 7,000 employees in Washington; it is headquarters, too, for the vast Foreign Service whose 16,000 employees represent the United States in about 290 diplomatic missions and consulates scattered all over the world.

You may find this vast organization more impressive if you remember that Thomas Jefferson, the first secretary of state, conducted business with a chief clerk, three lesser clerks, and a part-time translator.

THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE was the first executive department created under the United States Constitution in 1789.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There have always been crooked men, wicked men, malicious men—and women, too—but that is no reason why the citizens of such a country as ours should condone corruption, subversion, betrayal. Nor should we permit ourselves to be governed by the gutter by default.

Day after day, reports appear of official misconduct, internal revenue official's dishonesty, of RFC corruption, of the secretary to the vice president being involved in using influence, of police being associated with bookmakers—and what has been disclosed amounts to hardly anything. The story has not been told by half.

And there is more than that. Take these strikes—dockworkers' strikes, milk strikes, strikes in munition plants, strikes that in the present state of our country make no sense. Those 90,000 casualties in Korea did not strike.

There seems to be no use raising that argument. Strikers say that they are veterans too. Some say that they have sons in Korea. But still they strike. They tie up supplies to their own sons and to their neighbors' sons. And what they quarrel about ought to be, among civilized persons, adjustable not only in the private interests of individuals but in the national welfare. These men are not thinking clearly; most of them are misled by extraordinarily selfish so-called leaders who project themselves into every troubled situation. For instance, the very serious New York dockers' strike began as a part of a permanent feud between a man called Ryan and a man called Sampson, neither important to the needs of America.

There can be no reason why Harry Bridges should play any part in the affairs of this country. He is not one of us. He does not belong here. He has been ordered deported and somehow he and his lawyers and politicians connive to keep him in the United States.

The Department of Justice has been delaying since August 1950 to bring his case on appeal before the courts, they, not he, applying for the delay. Who is interested in keeping this man, who has done this country no good since some misery brought him to our shores, in this country?

The association of Bridges with John L. Lewis, and the Communists, particularly in the automobile, electrical and dockworkers' industries, cannot be constructive for America in times like these. Since 1936, they have kept the relations between labor and management disturbed with such constancy that it is impossible not to wonder why they do it. The motive must be other than personal ambition; it must be deeper than that and more perilous.

It is difficult to understand why Lewis, who hates Communists, can associate with them from time to time. He has never permitted Communists in the United Mine Workers, but he brought them into the CIO and gave them high office. He knew that such men as Lee Pressman and Len De Caux were leftwingers. He knew that 11 of his CIO unions were being organized under the control of Communists. Yet he hated Communists. How is this to be explained?

When Lewis temporarily broke with the Communists, they were strong enough to have him thrown out of the CIO. Yet, he is now back at the old stand, making deals with them designed to weaken the position of Walter Reuther in the United Auto Workers, so that Communists, associated now with Lewis, can gain control of that crucial union and industry.

DIET AND HEALTH

Form Of Heart Disease Is Due To A Nutritional Deficiency

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

STRANGE as it may seem, heart failure can result from long-standing nutritional deficiencies. This underscores the need for proper eating, particularly in view of the fact that the only remedy for this type of heart disease is in the eating of an adequate and well-balanced diet.

Until a few years ago, all cases of nutritional heart disease were believed to be due to a deficiency of one vitamin—thiamine or B-1. Recently, however, a number of cases have been observed where symptoms were different from those in heart disease due to lack of thiamine, and where they were not relieved by its administration.

No Single Control

Apparently, these cases are due not to a lack of one or two food substances, but to many, since no single drug or vitamin has been found capable of controlling them.

One of the outstanding symptoms of nutritional heart disease is a generalized swelling, especially of the legs, trunk, arms, and face. There is severe shortness of breath, and the patient may sleep with his head raised on several pillows.

The circulation of the blood is slowed and the liver is almost always found to be enlarged and tender.

There may be fleeting pains of a neuritic type in the arms and legs, alternating with "pins and needles" numbness. Cracking at the corners of the mouth is very common.

The heart size is greatly increased and there may be albumin and pus in the urine. An electrocardiogram usually shows heart damage. Tests of the liver reveal that the liver is undergoing cirrhosis or hardening, indicating that not only the heart but other organs as well are beginning to show effects of lack of proper food.

Well-Balanced Diet

Almost immediately after a well-balanced diet is instituted, some improvement occurs if the disease has not progressed too far. The swelling or edema disappears, the heart becomes stronger, there is weight loss, and the liver becomes less tender.

The drugs used for other types of heart disease do not help a great deal in this condition. The restriction of salt in this type of heart disease is of no help. The only treatment which seems to be of benefit is the institution of a well-balanced diet, and the administration of adequate quantities of vitamins.

The price of Christmas trees will not be controlled this year, but I don't know whether that will bring back Elliott with the pedigreed pines.

We bought a tree from Elliott a few years ago stamped "inspected by Fala" and it was a dandy, but next Christmas he had changed lines again.

There's one fellow you can meet on the street and ask "what are you doing now?" and not get the answer "same old thing."

Last I heard, Elliott and John were being talked up for a radio program, possibly under the title "John's Other Brother."

Anyway, it's a little early to talk Christmas trees; we've still got weeks to figure what those Washington plum trees have cost us.

Miss Doctor

Copyright, 1951, by Elizabeth Seifert. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Most any girl would have snapped at a chance to marry eminent and elegant Dr. Nicholas Cowan, chief surgeon at Boone hospital, and Nobel prize winner in bone research. But when he asked his co-worker, Dr. Mollie Brooks, to marry him, she turned him down—flat. Nicholas was without "heart," she told herself, and she wanted no "heartless" husbands. He was cruel not to help young Dr. Peter Shepherd, Boone's new resident surgeon, so urgently in need of sage advice. Thinking about it now in her luxurious apartment, Mollie Brooks found herself confused by Dr. Cowan's personality. He had been so very generous with her, helping her over the rough spots, teaching her how to live. Why, then, would he not caution Peter Shepherd, as she had begged Nicholas to do, caution this innocent young man against the wiles and snares of Clara Wayne, Peter's landlady? Clara, a psychopathic liar, could in the most motherly fashion, twist bits of information out of unwary people, bits which she used as bait for her vicious gossip mill. Peter must somehow be saved from indulging in even what seemed almost talk, with this evil woman, Mollie declared. But Clara's net already had begun to spread about young Shepherd. Calling him on staircases this evening, Clara very affably invited Peter to partake of her newly baked apple pie. And so over their coffee cups, Clara seduced, and Peter talked. Kindly, but unfortunately, of the hospital, of lovely Dr. Brooks and of Dr. Cowan, too. Yes, they did seem devoted to each other, Peter agreed. Poor Dr. Shepherd, a husband and father, Clara's sticky web, her chatting with Mrs. Wayne, just like being at home again, chatting with his mother! Oh, Clara would make much of their little visit this night.

CHAPTER SIX

PETER knew that Dr. Cowan did consult, and he hoped to see him operate, but he did not argue the subject with Mrs. Wayne, partly because instinct and training still kept him from discussing a Staff, and further, because, just about then, a kerchieved head popped around the edge of Clara's door, and a breezy voice asked, "Is anyone home?"

"Oh, come in, Lilly!" cried Clara happily. Peter got to his feet, and heard Lilly identified as one of Clara's friends in the church, and himself named as a professional. He related, his position in the Group, his residence in Clara's house established.

"We're all looking after him," said Clara largely. "Though maybe we don't need to. I understand any young doctor gets along fine if Dr. Cowan befriends him."

Peter, startled at being called the great man's protégé, was further puzzled by the knowing glances which the two women exchanged. He attempted a protest, and an explanation, but Clara hushed him. "Peter's afraid of Dr. Cowan," she told Lilly. Mrs. Walker, a comfortable creature in a print dress, sat down with a sigh upon the couch.

"I'm afraid of Dr. Cowan myself," she said, laughing happily. "Don't know why—he doesn't know me from Adam."

After a few minutes Dr. Shepherd excused himself and went up to his room. Below him he could hear the women's voices rise and fall. They were talking about "cases," he guessed.

At 10, Lilly went back to the hotel where she was housekeeper, and Clara moved about, tidying her apartment, thinking about the things which they had discussed and suggested. She was about ready to decide it was bedtime when her telephone rang sharply. She jumped, and put her hand to her lips. She hated the phone.

to ring so late at night! As she crossed the room, her lively imagination decided that Lilly had been struck by a car.

But the agitated voice which answered her was that of Hazel, telling her that her Miss Doctor was terribly sick with cramps in her stomach, and maybe Miss Clara would know what to do?

Clara agreed to come over at once and went quickly about the business of picking up her coat and scarf, making sure that her key was in her pocket. A satisfied, excited smile glowed upon her face.

The Square, as Mollie often told Nicholas, was indeed like a small town set down in the heart of the city. Even the servants on the Square were community projects. Hazel, a tall, fine-looking Negro, cleaned for the Ragdaddies in the mornings, and was Mollie's from four in the afternoon until after dinner—later if Mollie should want her. Clara's function in the community was that of trouble-shooter. If a baby sitter failed, Clara would substitute. A wife, faced with unexpected dinner guests and no maid available, could and did ask Clara to help.

With the hospital group only short blocks away, and the Square itself populated by nurses and doctors, the emergency of any sudden illness or accident found nearly always that the first call for help went to Clara Wayne.

Tonight, as she went out into her hall, she saw the light from Peter's open door shining upon the wall of the doorway. She started up the stairs, calling to him as she neared the top. He came to the landing, knotting his robe about his waist.

Breathlessly, Clara announced the emergency. "Mollie Brooks' maid called me, said she was very sick— Won't you go over with me?"

"What's wrong with her?" asked Peter warily.

"That's what I thought you'd tell us. Hazel just said she had severe pain in her stomach."

"Why doesn't she send her to the hospital?"

"It might not be anything so serious. You come with me, Peter. You can tell, at least, if she ought to be in the hospital."

"Oh, Mrs. Wayne..."

"Yes, you will, too. We all help each other this way here on the Square. You won't need to do a thing but give your advice."

"Well—I'll have to put some clothes on."

"Hurry up."

He did hurry and within five minutes he and Clara were going down the steps, out into the night, and along the sidewalk to the apartment where Mollie lived.

"Good evening, Eddie," said Clara brightly to the doorman. "They have an elevator, too," she whispered to Peter. "It's the ritziest place on the Square."

"I still think we shouldn't have come," growled Peter as they waited for the elevator to come down to the first floor. "Dr. Brooks herself would know if she was seriously ill."

"You don't know much about who is she?"

doctors!" Clara informed him. "They are the most helpless souls on earth if they get a stomach-ache. Or anything else wrong with 'em."

"But I hardly know Dr. Brooks and—" "You don't have to know a patient!" said Clara, stepping into the elevator. "Do you know how to run this? I'm always scared I'm jam something."

Hazel was waiting for them. She had her hat and coat on. "I was ready to leave, but she was feeling so bad. Oh, I'm glad you brought a doctor! That's what she needs. No, sir, she didn't eat no dinner, just complained of a headache and this cramp-like. I finally coaxed her to get undressed and go to bed."

"Yes," said Peter. "I'll have a look—"

Mollie's face was pale and damp with perspiration. When Peter's fingers clasped her wrist, she opened her eyes. "Oh," she said. The pain drew her attention, and she winced, drawing her knees upward. "Stomach ache!" she gasped.

His hand folded back the satin quilt; she managed to shake her head. "Not appendix—best of reasons!"

"The appendix is out?"

She nodded and closed her eyes, her teeth clenched together, her knees again drawing upward in a spasm of pain.

Behind him the two women watched, wide-eyed, and whispered together. "It do, for a fact!" said Hazel aloud.

Peter glanced around. Clara stepped backward, beckoning to him. Her manner-mysterious and somewhat triumphant, she led him up the little flight of stairs again, across the balcony-like dining room and into a small and shining kitchen.

"What is it?" asked Peter, uncomfortably, his eyes still on his patient out in the main room.

"Hazel and I think," said Clara urgently, "that it acts just like a miscarriage."

Peter's head snapped up. "Don't be ridiculous! You can't tell a thing like that without the proper tests," he went on. "I'd have to take her to the hospital for them. I mean to take her! Where's the phone?"

"Do you want me to phone for an ambulance?"

"I'll do it," said Peter, still angry, because he had been startled.

Mollie made no protest when he told her that he felt she should go to the hospital. "I think it is no more than a simple gastric disturbance," he said clearly, especially for the benefit of the two hovering women, "but tests are indicated. I don't care to give you a sedative just now—"

"All right," Mollie breathed.

It was Hazel who said the cautioning word to Clara as the two women moved about, straightening Mollie's apartment, turning off the lights, closing the door. "Miss Doctor won't want all this talked about."

"Of course not. I won't say a word."

PUBLIC MORALS

THERE are abundant symptoms of a moral collapse in high places in the United States. Today's rascals are circumspect and subtle. They manage, most of them, to stay within legal bounds. Principally they violate not the letter of the law, but its spirit. Their offenses are mostly against propriety and ethics.

In many ways this is more dangerous than old-fashioned corruption, because while it is difficult to detect and even more difficult to punish, its effects on public standards of integrity and honor can be more degrading than outright criminality.

This unhappy condition has engaged the attention of Congress. A Senate subcommittee, after investigation, has submitted a report notable for its bluntness and frank in its expressions of dismay. The subcommittee spares none. It criticizes both the executive branch, and Congress and finally the public itself.

"Influence peddlers can exist only as long as businessmen or others are willing to patronize them," the committee says. "Favoritism can be a problem only when individual men and women seek favors of the government" by offering gifts and exerting improper pressure. It blames "interested parties not willing to let the wheels of government turn unassisted."

At least part of the trouble stems from perpetuation of depression-born emergency agencies, such as RFC. In part it stems from over-regulation of private enterprise and the appointment of regulators who are no better than the businessmen whose misdeeds invited government interference. The Senate subcommittee proposes a series of enactments which would tend to check the recent evils symbolized by the White House stenographer's mink coat.

But laws alone will not be enough. They can always be evaded by the ingenious. It is necessary also to appoint men of whose honesty there can be no doubt and then to show no mercy to those who turn out to be crooks.

The committee asserts that "the moral standards of the country provide the ethical environment which in turn conditions the standard of behavior of public officials." This is only partly true. It is no justification for official corruption. Government leads. It sets the pace and establishes the tone of national life. Primary responsibility for honest government rests with Congress and the White House. If their ethics are sound, no crooked businessman can prevail against them.

Congressmen continue to vote for higher taxes while wondering audibly whether they aren't too high. If they are really in doubt, let them ask the taxpayers.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There have always been crooked men, wicked men, malicious men—and women, too—but that is no reason why the citizens of such a country as ours should condone corruption, subversion, betrayal. Nor should we permit ourselves to be governed by the gutter by default.

Day after day, reports appear of official misconduct, internal revenue official's dishonesty, of RFC corruption, of the secretary to the vice president being involved in using influence, of police being associated with bookmakers—and what has been disclosed amounts to hardly anything. The story has not been told by half.

And there is more than that. Take these strikes—dockworkers' strikes, milk strikes, strikes in munition plants, strikes that in the present state of our country make no sense. Those 90,000 casualties in Korea did not strike.

There seems to be no use raising that argument. Strikers say that they are veterans too. Some say that they have sons in Korea. But still they strike. They tie up supplies to their own sons and to their neighbors' sons. And what they quarrel about ought to be, among civilized persons, adjustable not only in the private interests of individuals but in the national welfare. These men are not thinking clearly; most of them are misled by extraordinarily selfish so-called leaders who project themselves into every troubled situation. For instance, the very serious New York dockers' strike began as a part of a permanent feud between a man called Ryan and a man called Sampson, neither important to the needs of America.

There can be no reason why Harry Bridges should play any part in the affairs of this country. He is not one of us. He does not belong here. He has been ordered deported and somehow he and his lawyers and politicians connive to keep him in the United States.

The Department of Justice has been delaying since August 1950 to bring his case on appeal before the courts, they, not he, applying for the delay. Who is interested in keeping this man, who has done this country no good since some misery brought him to our shores, in this country?

The association of Bridges with John L. Lewis, and the Communists, particularly in the automobile, electrical and dockworkers' industries, cannot be constructive for America in times like these. Since 1936, they have kept the relations between labor and management disturbed with such constancy that it is impossible not to wonder why they do it. The motive must be other than personal ambition; it must be deeper than that and more perilous.

It is difficult to understand why Lewis, who hates Communists, can associate with them from time to time. He has never permitted Communists in the United Mine Workers, but he brought them into the CIO and gave them high office. He knew that such men as Lee Pressman and Len De Caux were leftwingers. He knew that 11 of his CIO unions were being organized under the control of Communists. Yet he hated Communists. How is this to be explained?

When Lewis temporarily broke with the Communists, they were strong enough to have him thrown out of the CIO. Yet, he is now back at the old stand, making deals with them designed to weaken the position of Walter Reuther in the United Auto Workers, so that Communists, associated now with Lewis, can gain control of that crucial union and industry.

DIET AND HEALTH

Form Of Heart Disease Is Due To A Nutritional Deficiency

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

STRANGE as it may seem, heart failure can result from long-standing nutritional deficiencies. This underscores the need for proper eating, particularly in view of the fact that the only remedy for this type of heart disease is in the eating of an adequate and well-balanced diet.

Until a few years ago, all cases of nutritional heart disease were believed to be due to a deficiency of one vitamin—thiamine or B-1. Recently, however, a number of cases have been observed where symptoms were different from those in heart disease due to lack of thiamine, and where they were not relieved by its administration.

No Single Control
Apparently, these cases are due not to a lack of one or two food substances, but to many, since no single drug or vitamin has been found capable of controlling them.

One of the outstanding symptoms of nutritional heart disease is a generalized swelling, especially of the legs, trunk, arms, and face. There is severe shortness of breath, and the patient may sleep with his head raised on several pillows.

The circulation of the blood is slowed and the liver is almost always found to be enlarged and tender.

There may be fleeting pains of a neuritic type in the arms and legs, alternating with "pins and needles" numbness. Cracking at the corners of the mouth is very common.

The heart size is greatly increased and there may be albumin and pus in the urine. An electrocardiogram usually shows heart damage. Tests of the liver reveal that the liver is undergoing cirrhosis or hardening, indicating that not only the heart but other organs as well are beginning to show effects of lack of proper food.

Well-Balanced Diet

Almost immediately after a well-balanced diet is instituted, some improvement occurs if the disease has not progressed too far. The swelling or edema disappears, the heart becomes stronger, there is weight loss, and the liver becomes less tender.

The drugs used for other types of heart disease do not help a great deal in this condition. The restriction of salt in this type of heart disease is of no help. The only treatment which seems to be of benefit is the institution of a well-balanced diet, and the administration of adequate quantities of vitamins.

The price of Christmas trees will not be controlled this year, but I don't know whether that will bring back Elliott with the pedigreed pines.

We bought a tree from Elliott a few years ago stamped "inspected by Fala" and it was a dandy, but next Christmas he had changed lines again.

There's one fellow you can meet on the street and ask "what are you doing now?" and not get the answer "same old thing."

Last I heard, Elliott and John were being talked up for a radio program, possibly under the title "John's Other Brother."

Anyway, it's a little early to talk Christmas trees; we've still got weeks to figure what those Washington plum trees have cost us.

Miss Doctor

SYNOPSIS

Most any girl would have snatched at a chance to marry eminent and elegant Dr. Nicholas Cowan, chief surgeon at Boone hospital, and Nobel prize winner in bone research. But when he asked his co-worker, Dr. Mollie Brooks, to marry him, she turned him down—flat. Nicholas was without "heart," she told herself, and she wanted no "heartless" husband. He was cruel not to help young Dr. Peter Shepherd, Boone's new resident surgeon, so urgently in need of sage advice. Thinking about it now to her luxurious apartment, Mollie Brooks found herself confused by Dr. Cowan's personality. He had been so very generous with her, helping her over the rough spots, teaching her how to live. Why, then, would he not caution Peter Shepherd, as she had begged Nicholas to do, caution his innocent young man against the wiles and snares of Clara Wayne, Peter's landlady? Clara, a personable girl, could in the most motherly fashion, twist bits of information out of unwary people, bits which she used as grist for her vicious gossip mill. Peter must somehow be saved from indulging in even what seemed small-talk, with this evil woman. Mollie declared. But Clara's net already had begun to spread about young Shepherd. Lying him on the stairs last evening, she had seduced him. Peter to partake of her newly baked apple pie. And so over their coffee cups, Clara set, and Peter took, each other. Peter agreed. Poor Dr. Shepherd, a cautious type for spider Clara's sticky web, just chatting with Mrs. Wayne, her like being at home again, chatting with his mother! Oh, Clara would make much of their little visit this night.

CHAPTER SIX

PETER knew that Dr. Cowan did consult, and he hoped to see him operate, but he did not argue the subject with Mrs. Wayne, partly because instinct and training still kept him from discussing a Staff, and further, because, just about then, a kerchief fell to the floor around the edge of Clara's door, and a breezy voice asked, "Is anyone home?"

"Oh, come in, Lilly!" cried Clara happily. Peter got to his feet, and heard Lilly identified as one of Clara's friends in the church, and himself named, his profession tabulated, his position in the Group, his residence in Clara's house established.

"Where are all looking after him," said Clara largely. "Thank me, but we don't need to. I understand any young doctor gets along fine if Dr. Cowan befriends him."

Peter, startled at being called the great man's protégé, was further puzzled by the knowing glances which the two women exchanged. He attempted a protest, and an explanation, but Clara hushed him. Inside WASHINGTON

Foreign Affairs More Vital Than Ever to U. S. Citizen

New Responsibilities Weigh Heavy on State Department

WASHINGTON—International affairs headquarters for the American people is the Department of State, situated about half way between the White House and the Potomac river in the nation's capital. And never were problems more immense, momentous, and diverse thrust upon the diplomats of any nation.

Wars begin when communication between peoples breaks down and diplomatic efforts fail to bring about understanding and co-operative action to solve problems. The United States today is leader of the free world's independent nations that are striving to perpetuate civilization's finest heritage of justice and human rights, and to defend them from Communism's international conspiracy manipulated from Moscow's Kremlin.

This new responsibility makes our State department a tangible target of attack by propagandists and headline-hunting politicians abroad and in this country. No other agency of our government stands so immediately under the spotlight of world attention. Let's look at the organization and functions of the State department. The headquarters is only one of some 25 buildings occupied by the department's 7,000 employees in Washington; it is headquarters, too, for the vast Foreign Service whose 16,000 employees represent the United States in about 290 diplomatic missions and consulates scattered all over the world.

You may find this vast organization more impressive if you remember that Thomas Jefferson, the first secretary of state, conducted business with a chief clerk, three lesser clerks, and a part-time translator.

THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE was the first executive department created under the United States Constitution in 1789.

Today the secretary of state remains the highest ranking member of the President's cabinet. He is the President's chief adviser in making and carrying out United States foreign policy. He is responsible to the President for operations of the State department and the United States Foreign Service.

So immense, complex and important have become our international relations that most of our domestic affairs have their international ramifications. The farmer in the Middle West, the miner of iron ore, coal and other minerals vital to world economy, the industrial plant worker—all these, along with every other American, feel daily the impact of foreign affairs.

"Our foreign relations reflect the will of the American people toward the international issues that face this nation," Secretary of State Dean Acheson recently asserted. "Since every one of us exercises some influence on our foreign affairs, we should all understand how our decisions are carried out by the Department of State."

State department responsibilities are widespread, requiring an extensive organization. An under-secretary works closely with the secretary. Two deputy under-secretaries maintain close liaison with other federal agencies, particularly the Department of Defense, and supervise employees in the State department and Foreign Service.

ASSISTANT SECRETARIES head geographical units: Inter-American Affairs, European Affairs, Near Eastern, South Asian and African Affairs, and German Affairs. Other specialized functions cut across geographical borders: Economic Affairs, Congressional Affairs, Public Affairs, United Nations Affairs and International Security Affairs.

The State department has its legal adviser, its special assistant for intelligence, a counselor, a special assistant for press relations and an ambassador-at-large. Experts in many fields are required: economists, lawyers, educators, librarians, newspapermen, engineers, clerks and stenographers.

United States interests throughout the world are served by these State department and Foreign Service men and women who consult directly with the officials of other nations.

Their duties range widely: operating Voice of America and other "campaign of truth" efforts to get American information to peoples behind the Iron Curtain; getting technical know-how to peoples in underdeveloped areas; negotiating treaties; bringing foreign

How To Eliminate Waste In Preparing Vegetables Told By NARGUS Secretary

Holiday Recipes Are Offered

The home waste of fresh vegetables and fruits in the United States each year adds up to millions of dollars, according to National Association of Retail Grocers.

Mrs. R. M. Kiefer of Chicago, NARGUS secretary-manager, points out that elimination of waste in the preparation of fresh vegetables for serving not only preserves valuable food content, but also is an economical practice in this period of higher food prices.

"The American homemaker's use of fresh vegetables has been increasing through the years—to the advantage of her family's health," she said. "but there is room for still greater use of vegetables."

For example, the green leaves of cauliflower are an excellent source of vitamins, and Mrs. Kiefer advises against cutting them off when preparing cauliflower. They should be eaten along with the "curd," she says.

The outer leaves of the lettuce are equally high in vitamin content and shouldn't be thrown away. The chlorophyll in these green leaves, she adds, is now considered a possible deterrent to infection.

Always popular for garnishing and flavor, parsley is recognized as being vitamin rich, and shouldn't be set aside after it has served its decorative purpose.

Generally speaking, the skin shouldn't be peeled from potatoes before they are cooked. The paring process usually cuts away a considerable percentage of the flesh immediately below the skin and that portion, Mrs. Kiefer points out, is the most valuable. It contains a higher percentage of mineral matter, soluble carbohydrates and soluble nitrogenous matter than all other portions.

Also, it is not necessary to pare the thin skin from young carrots. Such peeling can be wasteful and destructive to this wholesome vegetable, which, she says, needs only to be well scrubbed with a stiff brush.

Young turnip tops which are frequently cut off and thrown away are excellent as greens and particularly valuable for their minerals. Mrs. Kiefer suggests they be cooked in soup or in combination with other greens, such as spinach and beet-tops. She also recommends the trimmings of celery—either fresh or dried—for flavoring broth.

For the coming holiday season, National Association of Retail Grocers has prepared "Recipes for Holiday Hospitality." It may be obtained at the association's headquarters, 360 North Michigan avenue, Chicago 1, Ill.

Washington 4-H Clubs Presented With Awards

Washington Township's 4-H Club boys and girls held their annual achievement program and were presented with certificates for their year's work and service pins by Robert Schwartz, associate agricultural extension agent, at a meeting of Washington grange, Friday evening.

A playlet was also given by 4-H members in which a mock "Grange program" was arranged, with young people demonstrating their ability to sing, play musical instruments and give recitations, in try-outs for the "program."

Following the entertainment feature, a covered dish dinner was served, arranged by the committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Stout and Mr. and Mrs. Maynard Hulse.

Next meeting of the Grange will be held a week later than the regular date, on Nov. 16. At this meeting there will be a covered dish dinner at 7 p. m.

Lutheran Family Circle Meets For Dinner

Games and contests were played following a covered dish supper served Sunday evening by Trinity Lutheran Family Circle.

Approximately 50 members and guests attended the affair which included a business meeting when plans were made for a turkey supper at the November meeting.

President of the group turned over a check to the treasurer, received as prize money from the Pumpkin Show float.

To create a center of interest, use a mirror of the right proportion over chests, tables, desk or sofa. It's sure to catch the eye. You might even choose a colored mirror that blends with the scheme of your room.

AFTER 30 MONTHS in Africa, writer Rebecca Hourwich Reyher, shown on liner arriving back in New York, says the average man doesn't pay enough attention to his wife. As an illustration, she told of a native chief who had 104 wives, but lost 54 of them because they became "lonely and frustrated." She said the chief, sovereign of 20,000 natives in the British Cameroons, was 80 years old, was furious at "defaulters," but it was too late. (International)

New Idea, Skirt 'Windows,' Makes Fortune For Texan

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—She walked in—with her beauty, her Texas drawl and her $2 million business—and they didn't believe it!

The "They" were the 220 members of the "Young Presidents' Organization," a heretofore strictly virile group made up of men under 39 years of age who preyed on business that net over a million a year.

The "she" was a slight and sleek Dallas beauty named Elsie Frankfurt whom they'd voted, by long distance and sight-unseen, to be the first woman member of the nationally-famous group.

In an atmosphere charged with unvoiced whistles of appreciation, pretty Miss Frankfurt thanked them for the unprecedented honor of being elected to the all-male group of executives, and then told the story of how she, at the age of 33, has become a seven-figure businesswoman.

"Elsie was born, raised and reared in a rarin'-to-go style in Dallas, Texas.

When she got over the usual actress-nurse-writer stages of career dreaming, she decided to become a dress designer. So she went to Southern Methodist university, studied fashion design for two years and then, a little disappointed with the course, she switched to business courses.

"I graduated," she recalls, "not knowing whether I wanted to be a seamstress or an accountant."

That was in June, 1938, the season when Elsie's older sister was getting ready to have a baby.

One day Elsie watched Sister Edna strolling up the walk to her home looking, as she described it, like "A beach ball in an unmade bed." Edna was wearing an oversized dress of their mother's—decidedly drab and definitely not a fit.

Elsie got out a sketch pad—designed her first frock since sewing classes. It was an ingenious navy sheer maternity suit, consisting of a slim skirt with a box jacket and perky white organdie trimmings.

But the real gimmick in the suit, which delighted Edna and later revolutionized the maternity dress industry, was a feature that made the skirt appear slim and feel comfortable. Elsie had deliberately cut a hole in the front of the skirt—an adjustable "window" which could be widened or narrowed to fit the size of the mother-to-be.

"It was so simple," says Elsie, "that it made a $2,000,000 business."

It took Elsie just three days to make the dress that made her fortune. She applied for a patent on the skirt, enlisted Edna and a younger sister, "Toots," (also a major in fashion design) and they formed the corporation called "Page Boy" maternity clothes.

With showmanship and acumen, the girls made it work fast. First, they rented a loft above a Dallas pool hall—carefully avoiding publicizing their location for fear of spoiling their reputations. Behind discreetly closed doors, they made enough clothes to make enough money to build a $250,000 brick building which still serves as their factory and one of several retail shops.

Elsie now has shops in Beverly Hills, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland and Indianapolis. And a swanky New York penthouse salon.

U. S. Must Build Civilian Defense

By MILLARD CALDWELL
U. S. Civil Defense Director

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration.)

General Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the United States Air Force, has made a startling statement—one which most Americans find hard to believe. He had said that at best we could knock down only 30 out of every 100 enemy planes attacking the United States. That means that at least 7 out of 10 would get through. Despite our traditional attitude that "it can't happen here," we must believe these facts.

This does not mean that our Air Force is ineffective. We have an excellent air force and our anti-aircraft defenses are good.

In the last war, the Germans also were equipped with defense weapons, but they were not able to stop our attacking bombers. On the average, we lost fewer than 10 out of each 100 planes. That gives us something to think about!

We know that everything possible will be done to stop the enemy at our borders, and to prevent sabotage within, but we also can be sure that, in case of war, a good percentage of enemy attacks would be successful in spite of all that we could do. That is why we must have Civil Defense.

10 Commandments Of Fashion Cited By Mme. Bonnet

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — Mme. Henri Bonnet, wife of the French ambassador, let American women know today why she is a perennial favorite in the list of the "Ten Best-Dressed Women."

Mme. Bonnet, in a radio network broadcast, offered these "ten commandments of fashion":

1. Don't buy a dress because it looks good on a friend; if it is becoming to you, buy it.
2. Don't go shopping for shopping's sake. Don't be tempted. Buy what you need because you will still need the dress you did not buy.
3. Don't follow blindly the dictates of fashion because anything exaggerated goes quickly out of style.
4. Don't wear too many jewels.
5. Don't wear furs with flowered hats. The fur is rich enough.
6. Shed those extra pounds.
7. Accentuate your good points. If you have a small waist, your clothes should make it look smaller. If you have small hips, wear pencil slim skirts.
8. Adapt your clothes to your life. Be simple in the daytime and regal at night.
9. Take care of your clothes.
10. Select your accessories carefully.

Civil defense is the sure way—the only organized way—for surviving on the home front.

Death Appears On 'Life' Plea

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 — William Keyserling was making a speech yesterday and got out the words "we must save lives" when he collapsed and died.

The 82-year-old man was the father of Leon Keyserling, chairman of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers.

The elder Keyserling was addressing the national report conference of the United Jewish Appeal when he was stricken. He died despite the efforts of three doctors in the audience. They attributed his death to a heart ailment.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

If you're a 'teener' without a problem or a question on your mind, you're one in a million. Here's a letter from a high school boy to prove it:

"I am a boy of 15 and have been going with a girl I like very much. Recently she broke off with me."

"She likes another now, but that boy doesn't like her. I would like to know how I may get her to go back with me."

Ans.—Why play second fiddle with a girl who has proven that she likes another boy better than you? There are lots of other nice girls. If you get acquainted with them, you'll find another you'll enjoy dating.

If you try to get her back now, she won't have any respect for you. But if you date other girls and have fun with them, perhaps she'll want to date you again herself, and maybe you'll hear from her.

This is a different kind of problem... from a girl:—

"Is there any way to get rid of bags and lines under the eyes?" she writes. "I am only 14 and my eyes are very wrinkled. They say it makes me look older than I am. Can you help me?"

Ans.—Lines and "bags" around the eyes are usually caused by lack of sleep, eye-strain or rubbing.

To get rid of them, get more sleep—at least, nine hours every night. Avoid eye-strain by wearing sun-glasses when you're in bright sunshine for long periods; avoid reading under too-bright or too-dim

LIFE EXPECTANCY GROWING

Medics Make Big Gains, But Many Tasks Remain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 — Great strides by medical science have helped send life expectancy of the average American to the highest levels in history.

Just this week a statistical report by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. said average life expectancy of the American worker has leaped three years since World War II to better than 68 years.

A factor in this gain has been the success of medical science in defeating contagious diseases. This does not mean, however, that the fight against disease can be relaxed, and a top government medical authority today told why.

He is Dr. Alexander D. Langmuir, chief of epidemiology, communicable disease center, U. S. Public Health Service. He declared:

"We have completely licked smallpox in the United States. Diphtheria is declining very rapidly. Whooping cough is on the way down. We probably can lick mumps and flu, too. That is how the fight stands today against these diseases in America." He continued:

"IT IS A FIGHT," waged by doctors, public health services and entire communities, that is growing stronger all the time.

"There is, however, some danger that because we have beaten a disease like smallpox, people will relax."

"Because of the excellent work that's been done, people tend to forget that there is still a great deal of work to do in fighting communicable diseases. The logical objective must be eradication—nothing short of it. This can be done by beating one disease at a time."

"The biggest weapon in the fight is systematic immunization of babies and school children. Then, when a disease is introduced into the country, what might become an epidemic is easily controlled."

"Let's look at the two diseases now on the wane. Diphtheria is disappearing at a very rapid rate—but at the last count was taking 634 deaths a year in this country. Whooping cough is also declining, but caused 1,100 deaths a year. There is little excuse for even this low number of yearly deaths. If we promote more effective immunization, these diseases should be wiped out."

"THE VIRUSES of influenza and mumps now can be grown—which means we ought to be able to produce vaccines in the near future for general use. The big stumbling block has been removed."

"Even where deaths from infectious diseases have been minimized, loss of time from work and school because of illness is still great. That's another reason why

U. S. Must Build Civilian Defense

By MILLARD CALDWELL
U. S. Civil Defense Director

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration.)

General Hoyt Vandenberg, chief of staff of the United States Air Force, has made a startling statement—one which most Americans find hard to believe. Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

EGYPT

Editorial comment on Egypt's efforts to break her Suez Canal and land treaties with Britain is principally concerned now with the treaty. A large minority of editors feels that Egypt's rejection of the Western plan for international protection of the Suez may not be final, but only to improve her bargaining position. But the majority fears that Egypt may continue to get full control of the canal by using the threat of Russian intervention. Only a very small minority of editors argues that America could safely fail to support Britain, and leave to Egypt the protection of the Suez Canal.

CINCINNATI Time-Star (Rep.): The Wafdist government of Nasser is trying to tear up a pair of Anglo-Egyptian treaties (for British protection of the Suez Canal and joint control of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan) that still have years to run. The great Western powers and Nasser have proposed a general security pact to include Egypt. Egypt's answer is to call out the mobs and play up the threat of Soviet intervention and World War III. The danger, to Britain and her Allies, is staying on and fighting are great. But once the Allies cleared out, Russia would move toward the Persian Gulf and the eastern Mediterranean.

ST. LOUIS Globe-Democrat (ad.): "The action (rejection of a security pact), inspired by Premier Pasha, strongly suggests that the rejection is not final, but is rather an attempt to make political capital at home and to stake it for his country a strong bar-

Double-Crop Raspberry Has Expert Backing

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—New developments in the rapidly advancing field of agricultural research promise better returns for farmers in future years.

One is called "September"—a new raspberry bush which bears two crops a year.

The new raspberry variety was introduced a few years ago by the New York state experiment station. Agriculture scientists report favorably on recent growing tests and "September" superior to most other types for freezing purposes.

Canadian specialists report the crop has been very successful in their country, and expect it to become a leader among Fall-bearing varieties.

The chief virtue of the new type is its double harvest—one during the regular raspberry season in summer and another in early Fall. It has also proved a vigorous and with berries that are bright red, firm and non-crumbling. The fruit is of a good size, and the Fall crop is produced from early September until fairly heavy frost.

Indonesian Plot Reported Quelled

JAKARTA, Oct. 29—Premier Sukarno announced today that the Indonesian government has uncovered a "foreign-supported underground movement" to assassinate resident Sukarno and overthrow the regime.

The premier disclosed that some 1,000 "subversives" have been arrested during recent security actions.

Antique Trunks Holds Battered Body Of Woman

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29—Sheriff's officers today attempted to trace ownership of an odd, 100-year-old steamer trunk used in the mysterious "trunk murder" of an unidentified, once-attractive woman in East Los Angeles.

The nude body was found yesterday stuffed in the antique trunk in a lonely field of tumbleweeds in the Bandini district.

Officers concentrated attention on the trunk as perhaps their main lead in the case, which they dubbed "a murder of few clues." Lettered on one end of the trunk are the initials "K. T. K."

The slaying was discovered by Victor Keesey of Inglewood, a truck company employee. He came upon the trunk and its gruesome contents when he walked through the field, which adjoins his place of employment. He told officers:

"The trunk was locked with an old clasp. I knocked off the clasp and raised the lid. A leg flew up. That was enough for me. I ran for the police."

Inspector Garner Brown said the murder victim appeared to have been 35 to 38 years old, about 5 feet 7 inches tall and of robust build.

The coroner's office attributed death to a series of blows on the head. The body had been in the trunk for 10 days to two weeks.

Crop Menaces Being Battled By Ag Experts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—Agriculture Department plant quarantine specialists are hard at work preventing new crop menaces from reaching U. S. shores.

While farmers and scientists act to destroy insects and disease on the farm, these men must make sure no new invaders enter the country.

It's not easy to keep track of such potential pests. Constant inspection is required—in automobiles, ships, trains and aircraft.

During 1950-51, for example, agents combed over 64,000 foreign aircraft, almost 47,000 ships, plus thousands of cars at the Mexican border.

Other inspectors were busy making more than 8,000 pre-flight clearances at ports in Hawaii, while such checks in Puerto Rico numbered close to 5,000.

Despite this tremendous job, department officials believe no damaging pests evaded scrutiny.

In fact, the quarantine workers succeeded in finding and destroying such farm enemies as the citrus black, Mediterranean and Oriental fruit flies.

One particularly dangerous glut for vegetation—the African giant snail—was often removed from military equipment shipped from the Orient.

VFW Being Urged Aid Vets More

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29—Veterans of Foreign Wars state commander Joseph H. Brueggeman of Cincinnati believes VFW posts should extend increased aid to veterans and their families.

Brueggeman urged the action at the closing session of the organization's seventh district Fall conference in Cleveland yesterday.

John F. Choffey of Cleveland also outlined plans for the state convention in Cleveland July 10-13.

Subsidization Tactics Rapped By Ivy Prexies

PRINCETON, Oct. 29—The Ivy League's "big three"—Princeton, Harvard and Yale—took a swipe today at over-subsidization of college athletes.

The presidents of the three schools, in a joint statement of policy, declared that their athletes receive only the same consideration as any other student when it comes to financial aid.

The statement, issued to "prevent misunderstanding and misrepresentation," also said that "no athletic scholarships or any special subsidies of any sort are given by Harvard, Yale or Princeton."

The presidents stated that "no coach, alumnus, or private individual" has any authority over athletes' admissions and scholarship committees.

Alumni representatives throughout the country are permitted to nominate candidates for the school, they said, but "no one except the proper officer of the college committee the college to admission or financial aid."

"We believe firmly that athletics are an important part of a sound education program," they said. "We believe, however, that all aspects of college athletics are subordinate to the essential purpose for which the colleges exist and must be controlled by educational considerations."

The statement was issued by Presidents Harold W. Dodds of Princeton, James B. Conant of Harvard and Alfred W. Griswold of Yale.

Dairy Farming To See Slight Hike Next Year

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—Agriculture Department experts believe higher costs will almost offset larger cash receipts for most dairy farmers next year, with net income only slightly above 1951 levels.

They predict that rising consumer demand will boost sales and bring a further shift to such commodities as milk and ice cream, and away from butter.

The experts do not say how much costs will rise in dairy operations next year, but they think total cash receipts will go up as much as expenses, giving specialized dairy-men a net income at least as large as this year's—and possibly a little larger.

At any rate, the returns are expected to be substantially above those of either 1949 or 1950.

High labor costs will continue to plague dairymen through the year. The department says any change in wages will be upward.

Dairy farmers will still have trouble obtaining enough hired help in most areas, but the government experts add that the use of milking machines will continue to free labor for other purposes during 1952.

Another important development is expected to be the further expansion of milking parlor-loading barn arrangements. The experts believe this method offers significant opportunities for reducing costs.

One person can handle a greater number of cows under this system—and milking the cows is considered less difficult.

Editors' Roundtable

"Editors' Roundtable" is a twice-a-week release based on a study of an average of about 150 daily newspaper editorial pages. The major issue of the day is analyzed and digested, passed on to readers as a survey of opinion from the nation's leading editors. It is the "voice of the press."

EGYPT

Editorial comment on Egypt's efforts to break her Suez Canal and land treaties with Britain is principally concerned now with the treaty. A large minority of editors feels that Egypt's rejection of the Western plan for international protection of the Suez Canal is not final, but only to improve her bargaining position. But the majority fears that Egypt may continue to get full control of the canal zone by using the threat of Russian intervention. Only a very small minority of editors argues that America could safely fail to support Britain, and leave to Egypt the protection of the Suez Canal.

CINCINNATI Time-Star (Rep.):

The Wadist government of Nahas Pasha is trying to tear up a pair of Anglo-Egyptian treaties (for British protection of the Suez Canal and joint control of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan) that still have years to run. The great Western powers and they have proposed a general treaty pact to include Egypt. Egypt's answer is to call out the mob to play up the threat of Soviet intervention and World War III. The danger, to Britain and her Allies, staying on and fighting are great. But once the Allies cleared out, Russia would move toward the Persian Gulf and the eastern Mediterranean.

ST. LOUIS Globe-Democrat (Ind.):

"The action (rejection of a security pact), inspired by Premier Pasha, strongly suggests that rejection is not final, but is rather an attempt to make political capital at home and to stake out his country a strong bargaining position."

Double-Crop Raspberry Has Expert Backing

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—New developments in the rapidly advancing field of agricultural research promise better returns for farmers in future years. One is called "September"—a new raspberry bush which bears two crops a year. The new raspberry variety was introduced a few years ago by the New York state experiment station. Agriculture scientists report favorably on recent growing tests. "September" is superior to most other types for freezing purposes. Canadian specialists report the crop has been very successful in their country, and expect it to become a leader among fall-bearing varieties. The chief virtue of the new type is its double harvest—one during the regular raspberry season in summer and another in early fall. It has also proved a vigorous grower with berries that are bright red, firm and non-crumbling. The fruit is of a good size, and the fall crop is produced from early September until fairly heavy frost.

Indonesian Plot Reported Quelled

JAKARTA, Oct. 29—Premier Sukarno announced today that the Indonesian government has uncovered a "foreign-supported underground movement" to assassinate resident Sukarno and overthrow the regime. The premier disclosed that some 1,000 "subversives" have been arrested during recent security actions.

Editors' Roundtable

gaining position. . . Pasha knows, or should know by this time, that Russia does not aid her 'friends.' Moscow merely absorbs them into the Communist system. The Western powers on the other hand offer Egypt a full partnership, which from the broadest viewpoint of Egyptian national interest, is the only course which promises security, prestige and prosperity."

SALT LAKE CITY Tribune (Ind.):

"We are paying for the sins of imperialism. The Manchester (England) Guardian speaks of 'ghosts of the past troubling the future.' That is why Egypt is deaf to what we consider logic. She views Britain and Israel—not Russia—as the immediate threats to her sovereignty. The United States will have to stand by Britain, since the Middle East must be held. But the Egyptian troubles ought to teach us—as Greece and Iran apparently did not—that we should do the leading henceforth because of those British 'ghosts of the past.'"

CHICAGO Tribune (Ind.):

"It would strain the facts to say that the United States has no interest at all in the outcome, but it does not strain the facts to say that a settlement satisfactory to the Egyptians could also be altogether satisfactory to us. Surely there is nothing in American tradition or interest which commands us to throw our weight against peoples who are trying to do what the United States itself had to do to gain its independence. . . The Egyptians are not going to side with us if they have reason to regard us as their oppressors and, on the contrary, will inevitably turn to Russia as their friend."

LEXINGTON Leader (Rep.):

"While the Suez Canal is in Egyptian territory, it was not built by Egyptian engineers or with Egyptian capital, and has proved enormously beneficial to that country while costing her nothing. The waterway is an international one. It should not, in theory or practice, be under the control of any particular country. . . Nothing would suit Russia better than to see Egypt assume control of the canal zone, to have the British lose prestige, to foment trouble in all that region, to fan the flames in both Egypt and Iran, and to move in to fill the power vacuum."

SAN DIEGO Union (Rep.):

"We have alienated Iran by intervening in a dispute with which we had no responsibility. Egyptian mobs are coupling us with Great Britain in their hatred. There is no love for us in Arabia or the neighbor states. We have no friends in India or Pakistan. We are suspected of bolstering the Colonial holdings of the French in Indo-China and the British in Malaya. . . Meanwhile, we are doing our best to fulfill Stalin's prediction that the United States will 'spend itself into bankruptcy.' Isn't it about time that we keep our nose out of the affairs of other peoples. . . ?"

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE Monitor (Ind.):

"The Egyptians may be willing to cast their own safety to the winds, but that does not mean that the free world must let them. For the non-Communist nations, which have been painstakingly building a wall against possible Soviet aggression in Europe and the Far East, cannot afford to see that wall breached in the Middle East. Especially not when they stand on valid treaty rights in insisting on competent defense of the life line to the Orient."

Antique Trunks Holds Battered Body Of Woman

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 29—Sheriff's officers today attempted to trace ownership of an odd, 100-year-old steamer trunk used in the mysterious "trunk murder" of an unidentified, once-attractive woman, in East Los Angeles.

The nude body was found yesterday stuffed in the antique trunk in a lonely field of tumbleweeds in the Bandini district.

Officers concentrated attention on the trunk as perhaps their main lead in the case, which they dubbed "a murder of few clues." Lettered on one end of the trunk are the initials "K. T. K."

The slaying was discovered by Victor Keesey of Inglewood, a truck company employee. He came upon the trunk and its gruesome contents when he walked through the field, which adjoins his place of employment. He told officers:

"The trunk was locked with an old clasp. I knocked off the clasp and raised the lid. A leg flew up. That was enough for me. I ran for the police."

Inspector Garner Brown said the murder victim appeared to have been 35 to 38 years old, about 5 feet 7 inches tall and of robust build.

The coroner's office attributed death to a series of blows on the head. The body had been in the trunk for 10 days to two weeks.

Crop Menaces Being Battled By Ag Experts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—Agriculture Department plant quarantine specialists are hard at work preventing new crop menaces from reaching U. S. shores.

While farmers and scientists act to destroy insects and disease on the farm, these men must make sure no new invaders enter the country.

It's not easy to keep track of such potential pests. Constant inspection is required—in automobiles, ships, trains and aircraft.

During 1950-51, for example, agents combed over 64,000 foreign aircraft, almost 47,000 ships, plus thousands of cars at the Mexican border.

Other inspectors were busy making more than 8,000 pre-flight clearances at ports in Hawaii, while such checks in Puerto Rico numbered close to 5,000.

Despite this tremendous job, department officials believe no damaging pests evaded scrutiny.

In fact, the quarantine workers succeeded in finding and destroying such farm enemies as the citrus black, Mediterranean and Oriental fruit flies.

One particularly dangerous glut-ton for vegetation—the African giant snail—was often removed from military equipment shipped from the Orient.

FIGHT FOLLOWS TOLEDO TILT

Cincinnati, Xavier Top Ohio College Grid Teams

COLUMBUS, Oct. 29 — It looks today as if Cincinnati's two grid iron powerhouses will dominate the Ohio college football scene this season.

Cincinnati U and Xavier both soundly trounced their opponents over the weekend to remain unbeaten in seven games and both are favored to retain their clean standings for their annual clash Nov. 17.

In the state's top game yesterday, Xavier's Musketeers shutout strong and previously unbeaten Dayton U 29-0 before an overflow crowd of 17,261 in Cincinnati.

The day before, Cincinnati's Bearcats continued its steamrolling with a 53-18 win over Texas Western. It was their highest score in seven tilts.

XAVIER, WHICH has a tie on its otherwise clean slate, was sparked by the three-touchdown play of halfback Bob Finnell. Finnell galloped 28 yards for the first tally in the opening quarter and added two more in the second.

Finnell took a nine-yard pass for the second score and climaxed a 72-yard Xavier drive with a one-yard plunge in racking up his 15th of the season.

The winners effectively bottled up Dayton's threatening aerial attack, although an injured finger hampered the accuracy of Frank Siggins, Siggins, who had a record of 59 completions in 114 tosses, was held to six in 24.

Cincinnati rolled up 552 yards on the offense, 255 of these on passes by quarterback Gene Rossi, against 271 for Texas.

The losers filled the air with passes throughout the game and scored once in each of the last three periods on tosses from Billy Plumley to end Jim Walker.

Heidelberg is the third unbeaten college team in the state. The Student Princes shutout Indiana State 40-0 for its fifth win against a tie.

DENISON'S BIG Red handed Muskingum its first loss, 21-20, in an Ohio Conference game. It was the first defeat in 16 conference tilts for the Muskies. Guard Andy Deeds, who hasn't missed a point after touchdown this season, converted three times for the all-important victory margin.

The TD's came on quarterback Dave Maurer's tossing arm. He connected with 10 of 19 for 217 yards. Ralph Sharrer counted for the Muskies, going over twice from the two-yard stripe and once from the one.

Ohio U's Bobcats also took a one-point decision over once-beaten Kent State 28-27 in a Mid-American contest, which dropped the Golden Flashes from first into a second place tie with Ohio U. Kent tossed a scare into the winners with 14 points in the fourth quarter.

Previously once-beaten Miami trekked to Marquette for a 27-7 taste of play with bigger schools. The host hilltoppers had little trouble with the invaders.

At Bowling Green, a seven-minute fight followed Toledo's 21 to 6 win over the host eleven. It was a bloody and bruising spectacle, but with no serious damage, however. Each team insisted the other provoked the battle.

Other results—Bluffton 27, Ashland 12; Wilmington 53, Cedarville 0; Western Reserve 15, Washington U 12; Slippery Rock 21, Mt. Union 19; Carnegie Tech 18, Case 13; Kenyon 34, Capital 27; Ohio Wesleyan 20, Oberlin 13;

Otterbein 22, Marietta 0; Wooster 7, Akron 6; Central State 41, Lincoln U 14; Hiram 26, Bethany 21; Delaware 21, Muhlenberg 7, and Wittenberg 20, Georgetown 12.

Browns Collect Thrilling 14-13 Win Over Giants

NEW YORK, Oct. 29—Paul Brown took his mink coat out of storage and the Cleveland Browns warmed up to the occasion.

Otto Graham, the practically peerless passer of the National Football League champions, unleashed one of his famous air attacks of old yesterday as the Browns broke the victory pyramid of the New York Giants, 14-13.

The victory gave the Browns a 4-1 record for the season and moved them a half game ahead of the Giants, who now have a three won, one tied and one lost mark.

"The game was played pretty much according to the weather," Coach Paul Brown said. "The wind was not too strong in the first half and Graham was able to throw a lot of passes."

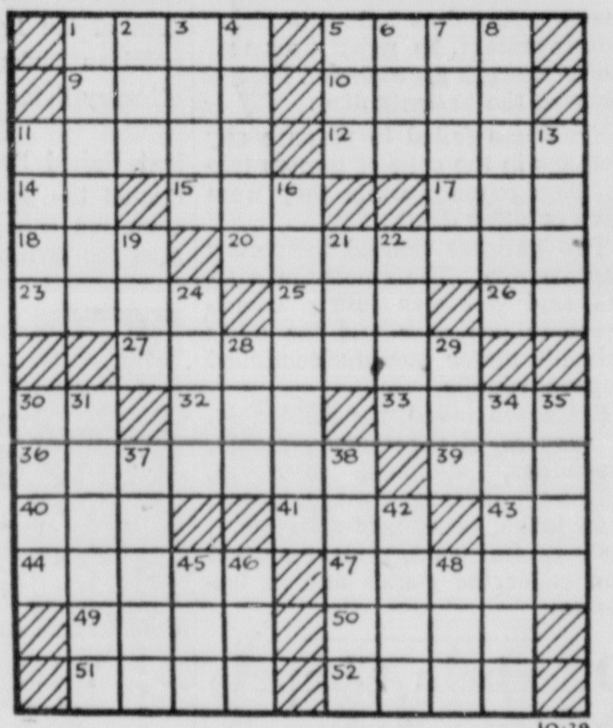

"BUT IN the second half he couldn't risk too many passes because of the swirling wind. We had to stay on the ground and so did they. That's why the complexion of the game changed so much in the second half."

Chicago's Bears beat the Detroit Lions, 28-23, on a blocked punt in the fourth period and took over undisputed possession of first place in the National division. End Ed Sprinkle blocked the kick and Bill Wightkin recovered in the end zone to break a fourth period deadlock.

The Bears got help from the San Francisco 49'ers, who belted the Los Angeles Rams, 44-17. Veteran End Gordon Soltau scored 26 points for the 49'ers with three touchdowns, a field goal and five extra points.

In other games, Bill Dudley scored a touchdown, kicked two field goals and three extra points to pace the Washington Redskins to a 27-23 triumph over the Philadelphia eagles.

A 23-point last period surge capped by a field goal by Fred Cone gave the Green Bay Packers a 29-27 win over the New York Yanks; and two scores in the final 90 seconds brought the Pittsburgh Steelers their first victory, 28-14, over the Chicago Cardinals.

No one can accuse Lewis of being a Communist. But who can explain his conduct?

Obviously, it is impossible to depend on our politicians. They deal not with fundamental principles or with the issues in a situation. They count the votes. They measure the strength of pressure groups. They fear the violence of organized elements who answer all questions with picket lines, legal or illegal, with threats and intimidations. The police are generally instructed to ignore unlawful picketing lest they offend prospective voters. Party politics are paramount.

It simply cannot continue to go on that way without the citizens sooner or later taking matters in their own hands as they have done before in this country. And that is no solution, for it can only mean more disorders, more confusion, more injustice and hatred.

Corruption breeds not only corruption but lawlessness. When at the top of the government are moral cowards, the worst elements in the population gain control. They risk greatly because they recognize the smallness of heart. The selfishness of those at the helm of government.

Ohio's Bookies Seek Cover As New Tax Nears

CLEVELAND, Oct. 29—The federal excise tax going into effect Thursday has bookmakers running for cover.

The Internal Revenue Bureau has forwarded 40,000 tax forms to Cleveland in the hope that there may be that many bookie operators uncovered in Ohio.

However, Internal Revenue Collector Thomas M. Carey said he could not account for the large number of forms sent, indicating he did not expect to uncover that many bookies, runners and policy operators.

Continental Press, Cleveland-owned race result service, is said to be one of the targets of the strong tax provision enacted by Congress.

The service was singled out by the Kefauver Crime Committee as the nub of the bookmaking business in the Buckeye State.

TESTS OF KREBIOZEN TOLD Dispute Boils As Medics Label Cancer Cure A Flop

CHICAGO, Oct. 29—A long-smoldering controversy over Krebiozen raged publicly today when the American Medical Association reported that the drug—hailed as a remarkable cancer remedy only seven months ago—apparently is worthless.

The AMA shattered precedents to report to the public that a special research committee of physicians and cancer specialists had tried the drug and found it without benefit in every major form of cancer.

But Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, world-renowned University of Illinois physiologist who first announced Krebiozen to the public last March, retorted angrily today that the AMA was "premature" and "has new evidence that the drug has merit."

The Krebiozen Research foundation, a non-profit organization of which Dr. Ivy is president, termed the AMA report "unfortunate" and said 300 patients who received larger doses of Krebiozen showed decrease in tumor size in 33 per cent of the cases and relief of pain in 75 per cent.

THE CLAIMS and counter-claims made public a scientific dispute which has smoldered ever since the drug discovered by Yugoslavian Dr. Stevan Durovic was first announced.

The AMA research committee said Krebiozen was given to established cancer specialists who tried it on 100 patients at seven centers across the nation. Case histories were sent to a panel of ex-

Police Relate Plunge Of Bus Fatal To 7

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 29—Authorities pieced together today the details of a freak accident which sent a loaded Pacific Greyhound bus plunging off a San Francisco Bay bridge ramp, killing seven persons and injuring 22.

The bus, bound from Salt Lake City to San Francisco, crashed over a big chunk of concrete lying in the traffic lane, careened across the road and tore out 50 feet of iron pipe railing before it plunged 40 feet to the street below.

The accident occurred just before dawn Sunday.

A few minutes before the bus moved onto the ramp, a light coupe had crashed into a lane divider sending the concrete block spinning across the highway.

The driver of the bus apparently tried to straddle the block in the highway, but it was too high and blew a tire on the heavy vehicle.

The AMA research committee said Krebiozen was given to established cancer specialists who tried it on 100 patients at seven centers across the nation. Case histories were sent to a panel of experts in Chicago for evaluation. These were the AMA results:

Ninety-eight of the 100 patients were reported as failing to show improvement. In most cases, their cancers grew worse. Forty-four of the patients died.

Krebiozen failed to produce any changes in the cells of tumors taken from patients while they were alive or after death.

Two patients showed temporary improvement. The cancer specialists said this was just a coincidence in one case and the other patient's major tumors continued to grow rapidly.

Krebiozen failed, the AMA said, in cancers of the tongue, mouth, esophagus, stomach, intestines, pancreas, breast, ovary, uterus, skin, lungs, bone, nervous system, male genital tract, urinary system, and endocrine glands and in leukemia.
